Best self guided tours of new york city

Search the Internet for searches related to your interests. For example, Walking Off The Big Apple (walkingoffthebigapple.com) offers New York As Outdoor Art: A Self-Guided Public Art Walk in Lower Manhattan, a guide that is constantly updated as new public art is introduced. It contains famous standards such as the view of the Statue of Liberty from the coast, but also offers lesser-known works of interest, such as the Balloon Flower (Red) statue of Jeff Koons at 7 World Trade Center Park and the 13-story tapestry at the Conrad New York Hotel. The walk takes you across the lower west side of Manhattan, from City Hall to Battery Park and the financial district. Select the places you want to visit, depending on your location and available time. Must See New York (mustseeneewyork.com) offers a guide to the most famous places - and a few lesser known areas - in Midtown Manhattan called One Short Day In Midtown New York City. Designed for people who need to cram their viewing time among other things, the tour takes a grueling 16 hours, but is adjustable to suit your own tastes. It starts at Grand Central Terminal, covering 2 square miles between the 1940s and 1940s. Choose a walking tour planned around the theme you will find exciting. Although not fully customized, Tailored Tours (tailoredtours.com) offers cheap, downloadable guides that are more focused on what you want to experience in New York. Romantic explorers can download a tour that takes them to a lover's imagination through New York's most beautiful and exciting sights, while customers can get a more in-depth view of Fifth Avenue or Times Square. Pub crawlers and museum-goers also find a tour just for them. Each guide estimates the time it will take to complete the tour and provides symbols indicating which tours have stops inaccessible in a wheelchair. Look at the city from multiple perspectives. For example, Central Park offers quite a few options for walking tours, both guided and self-guided. Visitors often come to see the leaves changing color in the fall, or to view the various works of art that line the area. One popular option is to see the Central Park Audio Guide, which includes a number of green signs throughout the park displaying phone numbers. Dialing a number connects you with recordings from celebrities, many of whom live in New York, which gives you interesting or little-known facts about the area you're standing in. Page 2 of New York City is very pedestrian friendly and many sights can be easily explored on foot. Although walking through the city at your own pace is an option, guided tours give you the opportunity to learn different aspects of the city through the eyes of an informed guide. These types of tours can also be a great way to explore places that are not frequented by tourists and to avoid the often crowded subway system. Greenwich Village Food and Culture Walking Tour Takes You walking trails and away from tourist parts of the city. Listen to the guide as you walk the tree-lined streets of Greenwich Village and learn about the history of an area that was once home to many starving artists. A food-tasting trip will make you difficult in Italy's old quarter and help you discover the special grocery stores, charming restaurants and ethnic restaurants that the village is known for.
